Safe-Driving Course Planned By Sunday School

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 29 (P)—There's a "Christian way" to drive an auto and Sunday School is just the place to teach it, Bishop Lloyd C. Wicke of the Pittsburgh Methodist conference said today.

Bishop Wicke, head of the church's 116-member curriculum committee, said the group has approved a special unit of Sunday School lessons on safe driving for young people. The course is entitled "Safety—The Christian's Responsibility."

Bishop Wicke added: "The purpose of the special unit is to present the safety viewpoint as it relates to the Christian ideal and to point older youth toward intelligent citizenship and driving stewardship."

No definite plans have been made for actual driving lessons, he said.

It's all part of a concerted campaign by traffic and safety officials to reduce the number of accidents that are involved in the welcoming of a new year.

Spirit Of Christmas Should Prevail Into New Year With High Optimism

The last Christmas gift has been unwrapped, the last expressions of appreciation voiced, the last carol for the holiday season sung, but the happy days of Christmas week are being projected into 1956 as the spirit of optimism for the New Year continues to grow.

Unless something completely unexpected and unpredictable occurs, the New Year will provide a continuance of the peak levels at which our national economy has been operating.

This is the theme of the glad tidings offered us by Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, whose departmental surveys provide the good news of consistent all-out production by such basic industries as iron and steel, aluminum, automobiles and trucks, and lumber.

Even a neophyte student of economy realizes that the business health of the country is linked indissolubly with that of the great leaders of production, and it must follow as the night the day that the multiple facts of the national economy cannot fail to reflect the bright lights turned on by the year-end surveys.

It is true that, being a cautious gentleman, Secretary Weeks has confined his confident analyses to the first half of 1956 alone, but as we mentioned earlier, such optimism must assure a superior business year short of some cataclysmic development now unforeseeable.

So, let the spirit of Christmas giving continue to prevail, as we await with confidence the arrival of another New Year.

This is no time for doleful croakings. Such pessimism we can leave to those who look at the world through dark-colored glasses.

Pacific Coast Floods, Again Brings Out Brotherhood Of Man As It Did Here

Our Pacific slope is a land nature blessed with mountains and forests of breath-taking magnificence. It is populated by a friendly and hardy people who built communities of unforgettable beauty.

But the terrible tragedy that has swept some of its lovely valleys is a reminder that nature can be cruel as well as generous.

More than 40 are dead and 50,000 homeless as a result of one of the worst floods this continent ever experienced. One veteran pilot said in awe that it was worse than the great flood in the Mississippi Valley, where he had done rescue work.

As always, there have been instances of extraordinary heroism along with the terror and suffering. Two Coast Guard helicopter pilots rescued 138 persons in the Yuba City area in one 24-hour period, and many citizens risked their lives to save others.

It was a dismal Christmas for the refugees, many of whom never will see their homes again. But the Armed Forces, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross did what they could to provide a semblance of Christmas for the unfortunate, even to bringing in toys for the children.

Despite our technological achievements, man is almost as helpless before the elements as his primitive ancestors were.

But a disaster like this also can bring out sharply the brotherhood of man that we take for granted in normal circumstances. Our salute to the many who gave up their own Christmas to help make one possible for the flood-stricken others.

Immigration Figures Prove Restrictions Are Not Stiff, Inhumane, Or Arbitrary

If somebody like Paul Robeson cannot get a passport, or if an alien like the Red Dean of Canterbury cannot get a visa, a terrific fuss is made on the subject and it is even written:

"The effect is not only to discourage Americans from visiting those persons who may be best qualified to dispel the misconceptions and fantastic notions about the United States which have been inspired unconsciously by visiting service men and Hollywood and consciously by the Communists and their fellow-travelers."

For the fiscal year 1955, 689,674 immigrants and visitors received visas and 473,703 passports were issued during the first 10 months. Only 401 persons were refused passports for other than the fact that they did not fill out their applications completely and accurately. Of the 401, 13 were refused passports because they are Communists and six because they are engaged in political activities which abroad would be harmful to the United States. The largest number of rejections, 300, were over citizenship, that is, their American citizenship is in doubt or does not exist.

Non-quota visas, issued under the Refugee Relief Act, amounting to 52,072, show an increase up to December 9, 1955.

In all these matters, an element of reciprocity must be considered.

For instance, visas have been extended from two to four years when there is reciprocity by the other country. There is no reason why the United States should offer benefits which other countries refuse for Americans.

Immigration to the United States has been on the constant increase since the end of World War II. For instance, in 1946, 337,388 immigrants of all kinds entered this country; for the fiscal year 1955, this figure has reached 689,674. Since World War II, from 1914 through 1955, 5,254,634 persons have entered the United States as visitors or immigrants. Of this number, 1,994,828 were either quota or non-quota immigrants. The argument therefore that this country has set up a star-spangled curtain is untenable from the figures.

It is interesting to note that few of the quotas are filled. For instance, Austria, which has a quota of 1,405, sent only 731 immigrants; Italy comes closest to filling its quota of 3,645 by sending 5,092 immigrants. However, Italy sent 7,525 non-quota immigrants, making a total for the fiscal year 1955 of 12,616 immigrants altogether. Soviet Russia has a quota of 2,697 and sent 1,215 quota immigrants and 143 non-quota. It does not say how these immigrants actually got out of Russia.

Many reasons exist for not issuing passports, apart from those already stated; namely, mentally ill, likely to become public charges, habitual criminals, refugees from justice, etc. Cleaning up the passports at the American end serves American citizens because since we are strict, such countries as Great Britain, France, Spain and an increasing number of other countries accept the American passport at face value and do not require a visa. About 600,000 Americans travel abroad every year and this is a convenience for them. If Judge Luther Youngdahl's decision is to prevail, the Passport Office will do no investigating but will become merely an office of issue and the American passport will lose its value almost of a guarantee of fitness to enter another country. At any rate, it is to be presumed that the reason that visas are waived is that other countries do not care who comes into them which is untenable.

There are the passport and visa facts and figures, formally issued by Scott McLeod of the State Department. It is from these figures that any arguments on the subject must arise rather than on emotional reactions to the miseries of the rest of the world. For obviously, it is impossible for the United States to absorb all who are weary and heavy-laden. We could neither feed nor house them. How to restrict the flow in the United States is a debatable question. Some believe in greater restrictions; others in less restriction. Some would temper rigidity of administration by a more merciful attitude; others fear a dilution of our civilization by the increased admission of persons from other types of civilizations.

All these are arguable positions but the assumption that restrictions at present are stiff or inhumane cannot be established by figures.

Holiday Season Parties Go On Sheer Momentum

It has been my impression that, whatever may be said of parties at other times, in the holiday season usually go along all right on sheer momentum.

The guests have had time to maneuver themselves into a suitable frame of mind and are pretty well braced to cope with whatever develops.

But the editors of Changing Times evidently had their misgivings when they were getting up their December issue, so they thought it would be helpful to pass along a few suggestions on how to give a successful party. It's a little late now to be calling attention to it, but perhaps somebody who gave a holiday party and can still bear to think about it may wish to consult the article for further analysis of what he did wrong.

The first thing about throwing a party, says CT, is to be sure you really want to throw one. Don't give it just to cancel out a lot of old social obligations and convince people whose hospitality you have enjoyed that you aren't as much of a deadbeat as they think.

It takes a while of a whiffing to get your case reopened by anybody who has already made up his mind on a point like that.

The second thing is to be careful whom you invite. "If sincerity is the necessary motive behind a party, good conversation is the lubricant that makes it run along smoothly."

The way to assure good conversation—or at least good enough for all practical purposes—is to select guests who have something in common besides the fact that they know you. That's what the magazine editors say, and no doubt they are right, theoretically.

This rule often poses a serious complication in practice, however. It is not good form in most circles to invite a congenial person—good conversationalist, good mixer, and all—and not invite his or her spouse.

Lots of couples aren't as careful about community of interests as they should be when they get married. They take each other for better or worse, and that's the way the hostess has to take them, too.

By the law of averages she is bound to get some of each. Sometimes this will put the kibosh on a good party in spite of anything she can do, even if she is Elsa Maxwell or Pearl S. Mesta.

The next rule is to lay in plenty of good food and refreshments, show the guests where they are, and then relax and enjoy yourself. While you're doing that, they can stuff their gullets and work up a common interest in what a fool you're making of yourself.

By following these simple rules, says CT, "you can acquire a reputation for being a real party-giver"—if that's what you want. But don't try to cash it at the bank.

When the Texan finally called a halt he pointed proudly toward the horizon and inquired, "Do you realize you are sitting on the highest spot in the state of Texas?"

"I wouldn't know about that," moaned the uneasy Easterner, "but I do know I'm sitting on the sorest spot in Texas!"

Robert S. Allen Reports

Cost Of Keeping Troops In Germany Raises Storm

Washington, December 30 — There is a huge new item in the forthcoming military budget which is certain to cause stormy controversy in Congress. It's $300,000,000 for maintaining American forces in West Germany.

The military budget for next fiscal year, starting July 1, won't be made public for several weeks, but congressional authorities already have inside word of this unannounced new item and are priming their guns for it. One of them is Representative Harold Oosterlag (R., N. Y.), member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, who was recently seized at gun point by Red guards while sight-seeing in satellite East Germany.

Since World War II, West Germany has paid the cost of Allied forces stationed there. But under the 1948 Paris Agreement, these payments, now totalling $760,000,000, will end next May.

After that, all the Bonn Government is obligated to do is to negotiate on possible future payments. That's all; merely to discuss the matter. Nothing more than that. And that is where the rub comes in, and why the $300,000,000 budget item is already stirring congressional opposition.

Following are the reasons for this explosive backstage situation:

Bonn has served notice on the U. S., Britain and the other NATO allies, that it cannot continue these payments—because of the heavy cost to West Germany of rearming as a NATO power. Bonn contends it can't carry both these heavy financial burdens. If it is going to rearm, then it can't pay the Allies hundreds of millions of dollars for "goods and services" for their armed forces in West Germany. It's got to be one or the other; Bonn is making it bluntly clear it won't pay both.

Meanwhile Britain has advised the U. S. that if the German payments stop, Britain will have to withdraw a considerable portion of its forces there—for the same reason given by Bonn: inability to bear the extra cost. The British say they, too, can't assume a large new financial burden. With them it is also one or the other; either German payments, or British troops will have to be sharply curtailed.

The U. S. and Britain have four divisions each in West Germany. Of the latter's $760,000,000 maintenance payments, the U. S. gets 40 percent; Britain, Canada and several other NATO allies, 34.8 percent; and France, 29.2 percent.

Seeking Answer — Prime Minister Anthony Eden will discuss this difficult problem when he comes to Washington on January 20. He has indicated intention to submit the issue to the full NATO council, if an understanding can't be worked out otherwise. Toward that end, Ambassador James Conant, on State Department instructions, has begun preliminary talks with Bonn officials.

The State Department is against the Germans' ending these payments.

It is contended they should be continued until German forces can replace the American and other NATO units now protecting West Germany from Communist aggression. The cost of these troops is a proper charge and should be borne by West Germany until capable of providing such an anti-Red defense itself.

The State Department believes a satisfactory compromise can be worked out with the Adenauer regime.

Pentagon chiefs doubt that very much.

That is why the $300,000,000 provision is in the new budget which President Eisenhower will send to Congress early in January. This was insisted on by Assistant Defense Secretary W. J. McNeill, Controller of the gigantic $35,500,000,000 military budget.

He held it is virtually certain that all or a large part of the $300,000,000 will be required, and Congress should be frankly informed of this right from the start.

Basis for the amount of the item is the payments being received from West Germany, as follows: For U. S. Army units, $242,381,000; Air Force, $51,944,000; Navy, $5,281,000.

Under the new-Pentagon budget American taxpayers will have to provide this money next fiscal year.

Note: Ominously indicative of backstage congressional attitude regarding increased foreign spending are the hostile remarks of Representative John Rooney (D., N. Y.), Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee, in charge of the State Department's budget. He is telling colleagues, "Secretary Dulles will have to justify in detail every penny of the additional millions he wants for Voice of America. He is going to have to do a lot of convincing to get any more money for that."

At their recent White House conference, congressional leaders were told by Dulles they will be asked to raise the Voice's budget from $80,000,000 to $130,000,000.

Disney Heads Wildlife Observance

—by H. G. Heller

Walt Disney, creator of the popular "true life adventure" movies and many other famous films and television productions, will head up the 1956 National Wildlife Week to be observed March 18-24.

Disney's acceptance of the honorary chairmanship was announced today by Ernest Swift, executive director of the National Wildlife Federation. The Federation, together with its state affiliates and with the cooperation of other conservation organizations, has sponsored National Wildlife Week since 1938 when the first such observance was proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

The 1956 Wildlife Week theme will be "Save Endangered Wildlife," Swift said. A nationwide educational campaign will point up the plight of those animals that face extinction over vast portions of their natural range. Among these are the rare whooping crane, a species down to its last 28 individuals now wintering on the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge in Texas, and the ivory-billed woodpecker, which some experts believe may already be extinct.

Other species to receive attention will include the grizzly bear, Everglade kite, Eskimo curlew, Attwater's prairie chicken, lake sturgeon, bighorn sheep, sea otter, Key deer, California condor, Montana grayling, trumpeter swan, and the lake trout of the Great Lakes.

"Many kinds of wildlife have disappeared from some states but are still holding on in others," Swift said. "The wild turkey and greater prairie chicken, for example, have been eliminated from vast areas of their original range although they still exist in reassuring numbers in some states."

"The 1956 campaign will be designed to make the general public aware of some of our past mistakes in managing natural resources. It will publicize the steps that can still be taken to preserve those animals that are on the verge of oblivion."

As in past years, State and local chairmen and committees will be named to coordinate the observance at local levels. Background information and special materials for radio, television and the press are being prepared and will be distributed through the state chairmen.

The 1955 Wildlife Week theme was "Save America's Wetlands," stressing the wildlife and other natural values of this country's dwindling marshes and swamps. In 1954 the theme was water pollution control.

CANDY—ON THE HOUSE — Some people like to build things. Other people like to eat. Sandra MacLeod was a fortunate girl this Christmas. She got a present you could do both with. It was a kit composed of a cardboard house frame and enough sugar wafers, gumdrops, peppermint sticks and caramel pinwheels to paint and decorate the outside with the use of sugar paste. Sandra, as you can see, stuck to the job until it was finished. One nice thing, though, with a kit like this you could always change your mind halfway through and eat yourself out of house and home.

Red Mainland Guns Shell Quemoy As Ships Skirmish Around Nationalist Islands

By Spencer Moosa

TAIPEI, Formosa, Dec. 29 (AP)—Formosa Strait stirred ominously today with Red mainland guns violently shelling Quemoy and sea skirmishing around the Nationalist Matsu Islands, official accounts said.

Quemoy and Little Quemoy—120 miles across the strait from Formosa—were battered by artillery fire for the third straight day. But the Defense Ministry said pointedly that mainland guns joined in this time.

The Red port of Amoy and nearby Tamsui Island had carried the load before. All three sectors joined in pouring 687 shells on the two islands before falling silent under heavy counter fire, the ministry said.

Driven Off

The ministry also reported Red mainland guns threw seven rounds of artillery shells at Kaoteng. Only four miles from the Red shore, tiny Kaoteng is the most ripe for possible invasion in the Matsu group.

Off the Matsus, where the Nationalists this week increased sea and air patrols, Nationalist warships battled Red gunboats for an hour last night and drove them off, the official Central News Agency said.

The defense ministry's communique made no mention of such an engagement. It said, however, that warships exchanged shots with Red artillery on Hsinmuy islet last night and early today.

The present Red maneuvering, however, might not necessarily be a prelude to large scale military action.

It was considered possible here that these moves might be designed to draw concessions from the United States at the marathon talks with Communist China at Geneva.

Surplus Butter Offered For Export

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Agriculture Dept. announced today it will offer an additional 10 million pounds of government-owned surplus butter for sale in the export market on a competitive bid basis. This offer is identical to a similar one earlier in the year which was concluded recently with the sale of slightly more than six million pounds to West Germany.

Reds Effective With Zigzag Diplomacy

By William L. Ryan
AP Foreign News Analyst

Editor's Note: This is the second of three columns discussing events of 1955 and prospects for 1956.

The Khrushchev-Bulganin speeches to the Supreme Soviet in Moscow yesterday serve as a striking demonstration of the technique employed by the Kremlin leadership in 1955. The year ends as it began, on a note of threat and bluster.

The performance of the Soviet leaders before their rubber stamp parliament illustrated the zigzag technique conceived by Lenin and applied effectively by Bulganin and Khrushchev this year as a weapon of great power politics.

Killed Geneva Spirit
It must be plain to all non-Communist leaders now that the "spirit of Geneva" was a Soviet creation. Only the Soviet Union could torpedo it, and the Kremlin did that at the October foreign ministers conference. The task before Khrushchev and Bulganin thereafter was to transfer the blame for the waning of the spirit to President Eisenhower and other western leaders.

So far as the Kremlin was concerned, the "spirit of Geneva" accomplished its purpose, serving as the zig for the previous belligerent zig. It raised hopes throughout the world for an end to the cold war. It committed statesmen and leaders to expressions favoring "peaceful coexistence," a phrase coined by Lenin, used extravagantly by Stalin and claimed wholly by the Soviet leadership. It transferred credit for peace efforts to the Kremlin. It created pressures against non-Communist governments both in Europe and in Asia to try easing tensions by negotiation. It created hopes that concessions to the Communists might bring concessions from them.

Threats Futile
The main target of Soviet foreign policy in 1955 was the west's position of strength. Threats failed to break up western defense arrangements, so the Kremlin went over to smiles. It raised the hope in Germany that reunification might be possible; in France that it might not be necessary to rearm west Germany. In Asia its aim was to create the impression that the real menace to world peace lay in the policies of the United States. It attempted to make "military blocs" the whipping boy for the world's troubles and to foster the idea of neutralism in the cold war.

The Soviet Union—and world communism—could deal more efficiently with its program a nation at a time. The only thing standing in the Russians' way was the world leadership of the United States. That leadership had to be discredited. Now Khrushchev and Bulganin are saying to the Soviet people and the world: "See—we wanted peace and competitive coexistence. We don't want or need war because we are sure of the superiority of our system. But so long as American policy remains what it is, we must go on testing hydrogen bombs and building our armed strength. Any nation which ties itself to American leadership is endangering its own security and damaging the prospects for world peace."

Red Imperialism
Behind this strong propaganda attack the Soviet Union is continuing with its own brand of imperialism and colonialism. It is gnawing away at the barriers standing in the way of political domination by the Soviet idea. The hydrogen bomb statements of Khrushchev and the others indicate they believe they can continue to do this without the risk of world war III because nuclear weapons have produced a standoff leaving to them the advantage of the political-economic offensive. (Tomorrow: The year ahead.)

ACTRESS Barbara Payton, 28, is shown outside the courtroom in Hollywood, Calif., after she was given a 60-day suspended jail sentence and fined $100 on a bad check charge. The actress, who recently married her fourth husband, was accused of writing worthless checks totaling $129 and passing them at a market.

Adlai Given Edge For Nomination

By The Associated Press

An Associated Press poll showed yesterday that a wide majority of Democratic party leaders figure that as of now Adlai E. Stevenson is again the best bet for the Democratic presidential nomination.

If they are right, and if a heavy majority of Republican leaders whose views were summarized in an earlier A.P. poll Wednesday are equally right, 1956 will be 1952 over again—Stevenson against Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The AP asked 126 Democratic governors, state chairmen and national committee members:

"Whom do you consider the leading candidate, in your state, for the presidential nomination?"

Kefauver Next

Seventy-six named Stevenson, 5 named Sen. Kefauver of Tennessee 3 named Gov. Lausche of Ohio, 3 named Gov. Hargman of New York, and the other 39 either had no choice or no comment.

Stevenson and Kefauver are the only actively declared, full-fledged candidates so far. Meanwhile, it was announced at Laconia, N. H., that Kefauver will tour the state Jan. 14-16, as part of his campaign in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential preference primary March 13. Stevenson has not said whether he would contest with Kefauver in New Hampshire.

States Take Action To Cut Death Toll Over New Year's: 1955 Total Close To 36,000

CHICAGO, Dec. 29 (AP)—A survey counted close to 36,000 traffic deaths at the turn of the new year.

The final 1955 highway toll is expected to approach 38,000 counting late deaths. This is some 4,500 more than the 33,417 American soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen killed in battle in the three years of the Korean War.

It falls short of the record 39,939 auto deaths in 1941 but is certain to exceed 1954's 36,000 deaths.

A survey taken by The Associated Press just before 1955 ended counted 35,785 Americans killed on streets and roads in the year.

The AP polled all states about their traffic deaths to date and their plans to combat traffic accidents over the approaching New Year's holiday. Up to date figures came from all states except New York, where statistics lag by three months.

Toll To Go Higher

Delayed reports, deaths through New Year's Eve and deaths later from injuries suffered in late 1955 accidents probably will boost the toll by some 2,000.

California topped all states with 3,349 deaths through Christmas.

The worst records were piled up on holidays—296 deaths last New Year's, 369 over Memorial Day, a record for that holiday; 407 during the Independence Day weekend; 438 over Labor Day, and 609 over Christmas—the bloodiest holiday in the history of motoring.

Appalled by last weekend's black record, officials in many states have ordered stringent enforcement measures for the coming holiday.

420 To Die

The National Safety Council says of this New Year's: "The cold figures force us to the conclusion that 420 will die."

This would be a record for New Year's holidays. The greatest New Year toll was 407 established over four days in 1952-53. The approaching holiday is three days, from 6 p.m. local time tomorrow to midnight Monday.

Here is the 1955 traffic toll for New York and Pennsylvania and plans to cut the New Year's toll.

New York—1,535 deaths in the first nine months of 1955. The state does not complete yearly statistics until March.

Pennsylvania—1,586 deaths estimated. Some 2,000 state policemen plus the entire Pennsylvania Turnpike patrol will be on duty.

Just Between Us

—By Bobby Westbrook

Just Between you and I. Warner The sound of sleet on the window pane can be a very soothing sound with the family all safe at home and no need for anyone to go out. But it can sound like ghostly trailing robes or ominous astral whispers if everybody is scattered around the countryside trying to get home, and you have to go out in it.

Actually when the wet is freezing to windshields and it's so slippery under foot that you can scarcely get to the car, the driving is so cautious that you're safer than on ordinary nights—I kept telling myself.

Fortunately, there were a lot of activities safely out of the way on Wednesday night. The Junior Woman's Club dance, the Maxwell's open house, the class parties and recitals and stuff. And very successfully over, too, from all I've heard.

They tell me they really packed them in for the Junior Woman's dance. The only place where there was room to really cut a Terpsichorean figure was in the treaty room where the rugs had been rolled back and there was room to twirl.

So naturally most of the guests whose tables had been reserved in there made a bee-line for the ballroom where there was no room at all.

Well, I guess after you get beyond the jitterbug age, a dance is more of an excuse for getting dressed up and seeing your friends than for dancing, anyway. And that they did, and very happily.

By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Sports Editor

LOOKING into 1956 as we bid the old year good bye we put our glasses on the sports stage and see:

The U. S. winning the Olympic track and field championships but failing again to do well in the distance events.

The Yanks repeating as American League champs and the Dodgers coming through again only to be beaten by the Yanks in the World Series.

Rocky Marciano defending his title again and the same old story being written after his victory.

Sugar Ray Robinson losing his middleweight crown but not to Bobo Olson.

Willie Hartack continuing his sensational riding on the turf and threatening Willie Shoemaker's all-time mark.

Frankie Ryff and Willie Pastrano zooming into boxing's glamour boy stage through television victories.

Nashua topping Citation's all-time money-winning record and then retiring to stud.

San Francisco's Dons copping the national cage crown and setting all sorts of records doing it.

The Cleveland Browns doing it again—without Graham.

Herbie Score whizzing through a 20-game season to become baseball's new ace pitcher.

AND STILL looking ahead—

The Montreal Canadiens winning the National Hockey league crown.

Another unknown golfer hitting the headlines to rate national laurels to succeed Jack Fleck, the 1955 U. S. Open king.

U. S. net fortunes dropping to a low spot with the loss of the top stars to the pros.

U. C. L. A. whipping Michigan State in the Rose Bowl.

Oklahoma taking Maryland in the Orange Bowl.

Pittsburgh trimming Georgia Tech in the Sugar Bowl.

Mississippi edging Texas Christian in the Cotton Bowl.

Auburn riding over Vanderbilt in the Gator Bowl.

Tenley Albright winning the Olympic skate crown for U. S. and becoming first American gal to do it.

West Coast getting major league baseball with the New York Giants moving in.

MORRISON ON GOLF

Chin Pointing Affords Success

By Alex J. Morrison
Author of "A New Way to Better Golf," Teacher of Champions

"WHAT KIND of a lesson do you want?" asked a well-known pro. It was his way of telling the pupil that the instructor could not do his pupils or tell them the truth. Most pupils would claim that they wanted only the truth. If you class yourself among these then I invite you to take off your rose-colored glasses.

Unless you do you'll not recognize some facts of the greatest importance to your golf and your relations with yourself.

As an example we can take the methods of controlling your head position during the swing.

If you believe things such as the following then you're still wearing your rose-colored glasses, for none of them is true.

The head must be held perfectly still during the swing. The head must be kept down. All you have to do is keep your eye on the ball. Your swing can be handicapped by holding your head in the proper position a fraction of a second too long.

Take off your glasses and study action pictures of the most consistently successful golfers from Harry Vardon to Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Ben Hogan and Sam Snead.

These pictures will show that the proper head position finds it, not still entirely, but free from raising, lowering, tilting or turning until well after the clubhead strikes the ball. Hogan, the most successful of all, held his head in position longer than the other champions.

Next take a club in your hands and swing in front of a mirror where you can watch the position of your head. Chances are your head fails to remain on the same level throughout your swing or it turns with your shoulders in the backswing or downswing. At best you may do no more than keep your eyes looking into the mirror.

Obviously, this can't control the position of your head, but the Morrison Key of Chin Pointing will get the job done every time.

And you can stop wearing rose-colored glasses.

Tournament pro John Palmer does a good job of keeping his chin and eyes focused on the ball, like Alex Morrison does above. Simply keeping your eye on the ball will not hold your head steady or in the required position, but proper chin pointing will.

Sets Century Race Record

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Dec. 29 (P)—Bobby Morrow of Abilene, Tex., helped by a following wind, equalled the world record today in winning a special 100-yard dash in 9.3 seconds.

The feat cannot be placed alongside the world mark held by Mel Patton and Hector Hogan because the wind was three feet a second beyond the allowable limit for international records.

Trimble Moves To Canada Job

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 29 (P)—Jim Trimble, fired two weeks ago as coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, has crossed the border to take over as coach of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Tiger-Cats are one of the Big Four of Canadian Football and one of the teams which have been battling the professional National Football League for American talent.

Tech's Speed Causes Pitts' Coach Worry

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29 (P)—

Georgia Tech's little-used passing ability impressed Pitt Coach John Michelosen more than Tech's belly series, a collection of deceptive plays with a common beginning, an intriguing name and a deadly effect.

Michelosen looks for his Panthers to have more trouble with Tech's passing and speed when the teams clash in the Sugar Bowl Monday.

"Miami used the belly series," Michelosen said, "and we didn't do too badly against it. We've seen films of three Tech games and we think we can handle it."

Speed Impresses

"I'm more impressed with Tech's speed than anything else, and I wouldn't be surprised if Tech passes against us."

Pitt has spent a lot of its practice time here working on pass defense and how to stop Tech's dizzy speed on end runs.

Tech passed only in spots this season, usually after its running game set up passes by quarterback Wade Mitchell and Topy Vana.

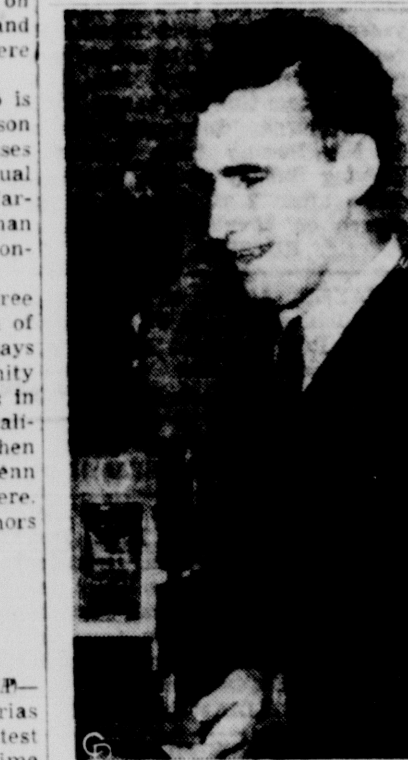

The belly series has been the foundation of Tech's rushing attack. The quarterback takes the ball from center and moves along the line. He can give it to a half-back knifing into the line through the middle, the fullback moving over tackle, the second halfback running wider around end or keep it himself. The ball often is pushed into a back's stomach, then withdrawn and given to someone else.

Beginners In Great Sport Of Skiing Must Place Emphasis On Their Fitness

By Central Press Association

NEW YORK—Most ski accidents, say expert Bonnie Prudden, would never happen if beginners would swallow some pride and admit they were scared and unprepared.

"What happens all too often," says the pretty Miss Prudden, "is that a skier rides the lift to the top of a mountain or a slope and, having arrived there, figures he just has to ski down or be shamed. In many cases he'd be a lot better off if he rode the lift back down, practiced more and exercised more."

Miss Prudden, though she ranks as one of the country's most accomplished skiers and was the first woman ever admitted to the National Ski Patrol, doesn't hesitate to admit that one of her own early experiences ended in near tragedy.

"There I was at the top of a steep hill, quaking in my boots and wishing I'd never come up. But I was too proud to admit I was frightened, so down I went. A tree got in my way, and I wound up with a shattered pelvis that kept me in the hospital for weeks. I'm sure the same thing happens over and over again every year."

Ski Expert

The Bonnie lass mended sufficiently to develop not only into a ski expert, but to become the country's top-ranked woman rock climber and one of its most effective proponents of physical fitness.

She now is director of the Institute for Physical Fitness at White Plains, N. Y., where she supervises a program ranging from the art of self defense (judo, boxing and wrestling) to figure control, gymnastics, fencing and, of course, ski instruction.

It may sound like strictly a man's job, but her proficiency is attested by the fact that she was among the 30 leading national sports and physical education figures who were invited to the White House by President Eisenhower last summer for a conference on the fitness of American youth.

The fitness theme ties in strongly with Miss Prudden's theories on ski preparation. Many physical education instructors stick to the old concept that participation in sports will build good bodies. Miss Prudden insists that the development of a sound, healthy body should come first.

"Then you can do anything. If you have a good body, you can become a very good swimmer, you can ride a horse, you can ski well. 'Don't ski to get into condition—get into condition first,' is her advice. 'It is just plain ridiculous to strap six feet of board to each foot and get out on a slippery surface if your body is not prepared for it.'"

Miss Prudden emphasizes that skiers should follow a course of exercises that build the abdominal muscles, the shoulders and the legs. Flexibility, too, is important as a safeguard against injury.

Homework

At her Institute for Physical Fitness, Miss Prudden's students work outdoors with full equipment for half-an-hour and indoors in exercise garb for another half-hour. She also prescribes homework, because "five minutes daily is of more value than an occasional two-hour stint."

Students go through such paces as running in place with skis and boots on; jumping up and down and from side-to-side, also fully equipped; duck-walking, sit-ups, push-ups, deep-knee bends and falling down and getting up. A simple exercise like walking up stairs with toes on the stair and heels pushed low can be of great help in strengthening leg muscles and improving one's sense of balance, Miss Prudden says.

Just how well her program has worked out is borne out by one small statistic: More than 1,000 youngsters have taken her course in recent years before taking to the snowy hills—and not one came up with a fracture.

Six Lettermen Bolster Penn State Wrestling Hopes

SIX LETTER winners represent the nucleus around which Coach Charlie Seidel hopes to build another title contender in wrestling at Penn State.

Leading the returnees are the two co-captains—177-pound Joe Krufka, of Plymouth, and heavyweight Bill Oerly, of Asbury, N. J. Oerly last year won the National Collegiate heavyweight title. Krufka was runner-up in both the East and the nation.

Of the other returnees, 123-pound Sid Nodland, of Bay Shore, N. Y., went unbeaten in dual competition, but lost twice in the post-season tourneys. Dave Adams, Bellefonte 147-pounder, lost two of seven in dual meets and three of five in tournament competition.

Also back are 130-pound Hal Byers, of State College, who sat out the 1955 campaign; 157-pound Joe Humphreys, also of State College; and 167-pound Ed Pasko, of Phillipsburg. The latter two anticipate competition from Dick Baker, of State College, and Dick Phelen, of Washington. Johnny Johnston, of Clearfield, will challenge Byers.

Trabert Due To Play Match With Gonzales

TONY TRABERT, world amateur champion of 1953 and now one of the newest play-for-pay boys, is coming to Philadelphia on Wednesday, January 18, when Jack Kramer's World Championship Tennis Tour stops off at the Arena for a one-night stand.

Tennis fans in this area will see Wimbledon, United States and French Champion of the year, and Pancho Gonzales, World Professional Champ.

The Gonzales-Trabert match feature of the Kramer tour, is part of the 100-match contest arranged around the circuit in which the winner will receive a $25,000 bonus contract. The bonus clause is an added inducement by Mogul Kramer aimed to produce one of the greatest grudge matches in tennis. The loser of the 100-match affair must drop out of the next tour, which not only means a dent in his pride but especially in his pocketbook.

In the preliminary to this match, Rex Hartwig, of Australia, who was considered the world's leading amateur doubles player this year, and Pancho Segura, the betting Ecuadorian with his great two-handed forehand, will be opponents. This will be followed by a double which will bring together the top professional pair of Gonzales and Segura against Trabert and Hartwig, who in a recent poll were named as the "ideal" amateur doubles combination.

Pressure Play

Tennis fans are in for a treat as a result of this stop-over of the Kramer tour for the one-night stand. The play-for-play program that Kramer has set up is right down the alley for the four competitors, each feeling he plays better under pressure when the chips are down.

Tony Trabert, who won three of the four legs of the grand slam in tennis this year and did the seemingly impossible of winning both Wimbledon and the U. S. crowns without the loss of a set, has compiled one of the greatest records ever produced by an amateur. He is an example of the American "big game" and it is believed it will be easy for him to make the adjustment to the indoor situation.

He is what tennis fans call a "shot maker"; he has a big serve, a wonderful backhand volley and a variety of passing shots. In 1955, he was able to win the National titles on wood, clay, grass and concrete . . . and he himself feels there will be no problem in adapting his game to the canvas for the vast 100-match contest in his first year as a play-for-play boy.

Kullman Named To All-Stars In Hockey Play

HERSHEY, Pa.—Arnie Kullman, Hershey's veteran center ice man, is among the additional players named to the American Hockey League All-Stars by coach Fred "Bud" Cook.

Kullman joins coach Murray Henderson, Dunc Fisher and Ed Kryzanowski on the squad which will oppose the Pittsburgh Hornets, Calder Cup champions, at Pittsburgh on Tuesday, January 10.

Arnie was a member of last year's All-Stars which handed the Cleveland Barons a shellacking at the local rink. He picked up a trio of assists in helping Fisher turn the "hat" trick.

Bill Haughton of Massapequa, N. Y., led the nation's harness drivers in 1955 with 168 victories and $399,445 in money won. It was the third year in a row he led in races and money won.
